

Dr. W. David Little, a Presbyterian layman who was formerly the Dunphy Professor of the Practice of Religion, Ethnicity and International Affairs and Director of the Center for Values in Public Life at the Harvard Divinity School. Little has also taught at the Yale Divinity School and the University of Virginia, among other places, and has been a senior scholar at the U.S. Institute of Peace. Now retired, he is the author of Religion, Order and Law, in addition to other works.

Calvinism and Politics:

What Reformed Christians Believe About Civil Government and Politics

The Reformed tradition has long been known for the value its adherents have placed on participation in public life as a way of carrying out the work of the church in the world. It has also been known for the distinctive view its adherents have had of the nature and purpose of civil government as well as the way in which Christians should conduct themselves in public life. This event is designed as an opportunity to explore the resources available in the Reformed tradition for thinking about the political challenges of our time.

Saturday, October 15, 2016

Old Presbyterian

Meeting House

323 S. Fairfax St.

Alexandria, VA 22314

www.opmh.org

REFORMED
INSTITUTE of
METROPOLITAN
WASHINGTON

9:30 a.m. – Noon in Heritage
Hall, Elliot House | Coffee at 9:00 a.m.
(corner of S. Fairfax and Wolfe Streets)

There is no fee for this event. For more information or to register, visit www.reformedinstitute.org or contact Mary Hill, Program Coordinator for the Reformed Institute, at 703.518.5125 or by email, mhill@reformedinstitute.org.